

This is a test blog

Hello, my name is John Andzelik, and this is a test blog. I am Software Developer, and I have been in the industry for twelve years. Throughout my professional career, I have strived to stay up to date with current trends in software development. I am quite comfortable on the back end of code, and interacting with databases. Front End, user experience design is always a work in progress with me.

I have designed this blog site to take advantage of .Net Core and Angular 6, Blogs listed will range from a variety of topics including, but not limited to Faith, Technology, and Current Events.

I hope that the articles that I post on here will be a blessing to all those who read it.